

TITLE IX

Top Nine Changes to the Proposed New (Again) Regulations

Featuring from the law firm of Dickinson Wright, PLLC

GEORGE BUTLER, III
and
AIMEE GIBBS

On the 50th anniversary of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, the U.S. Department of Education released proposed amendments to the Title IX regulations (again). The earliest the Biden proposed amendments will become effective would be in time for the 2023–2024 school year, and the proposed rules may undergo some changes in response to comments. However, because the final rules that become effective likely will be similar to those proposed, it makes sense to familiarize yourself with them now. We will provide a side-by-side comparison of the current and the proposed Title IX rules, and discuss the changes that will need to be implemented at the K-12 school level.

Learning Outcomes:

In addition, he has been a lecturer and author of articles on school education law topics for the National Business Institute, Professional Development Network, Michigan Association of School Boards and Lorman Education Services

AIMEE GIBBS serves as trusted general counsel for numerous public entities and private corporations, handling a wide range of legal services, including policy formation, risk-mitigation, regulatory compliance, employment counseling and litigation, and commercial litigation.

Aimee Gibbs' public entity clients include state and local units of government such as cities, townships, villages, counties, public authorities, universities, school districts, and nonprofit organizations in K-12, higher education, and other sectors. Public entity clients frequently rely on Aimee for her knowledgeable and skillful representation and swift resolution to matters. Clients' trust and reliance on Aimee's comprehensive general counsel legal services ranging from counseling to representation in commercial litigation matters is evident by the long-term client relationships Aimee has developed with clients, some spanning and evolving over 15+ years.

Aimee Gibbs also serves in a general counsel capacity to numerous private corporations, providing superior risk mitigation strategies, general employment and corporate counseling and litigation representation, as well as trademark registration, monitoring, and enforcement services. Within the private corporate sphere, Aimee has consistently and successfully served as legal counsel for national and regional banking and financial companies in consumer and retail litigation, UCC, and fraud cases, and has successfully represented registered representatives and broker-dealers in FINRA arbitrations and security investigations.

Clients form long-lasting partnerships with Aimee, and her sound legal representation naturally evolves into Aimee serving clients in the capacity of general counsel based on her superior knowledge base, successful policy and risk mitigation strategies, excellent litigation and settlement results, and prompt, comprehensive, and individualized attention to each client.
